

HEALTH HUMANITIES MINOR & CONCENTRATION

ARE YOU READY TO TRANSFORM THE HEALTHCARE INDUSTRY?

The health humanities minor and concentration prepares you to be a more thoughtful and human-centered leader in healthcare by treating individuals with integrity, empathy and compassion. Through thoughtful analysis and cultural competency, you'll be ready for challenging and multi-faceted situations in a variety of healthcare settings. Choose the path that's right for you:

- Health Humanities Minor: 18 credits
- Health Humanities Concentration: 12 credits

Both offer the flexibility to fit within your current academic workload and are available to a broad range of students pursuing public-facing careers in nursing, pharmacy, biology, chemistry or health and wellness.

"I chose Wilkes because it felt like home. The opportunities on and off campus are endless and there is lots of room for growth and development."

- Emily Repp '24, Nursing

INTERDISCIPLINARY APPROACH

Our program integrates insights from literature, philosophy, history and healthcare to help students understand health more holistically. Students will learn how to analyze complex ethical, cultural and medical issues, communicate empathetically to diverse audiences and develop practical and theoretical knowledge.

EXPERIENCED FACULTY

Our experienced faculty work alongside you at every step of the program as you explore and gain a better understanding of holistic healthcare.

STRONGER GRADUATE APPLICATIONS

Stand out in the competition by demonstrating versatile and humanistic thinking to admissions committees.

CAREERS & OUTCOMES

Graduates who are either entering the workforce or pursuing graduate or health-related programs will leave with a deeper confidence and understanding to pursue paths in medicine, nursing, public health, social work, policy and beyond, including business, government, education and nonprofits.
